A marriage certificate, when accompanied by proof of the identity of the parties, is admissible to prove marriage in a prosecution for adultery. An extra judicial confession by defendant of his marriage is not alone, sufficient proof thereof to sustain a conviction of adultery. On a prosecution for adultery, the husband of the one with whom he is alleged to have committed the offense may testify to his marriage to her. A wife who has instituted prosecution of her husband for adultery cannot testify that she is his wife: 2 How. An. Stat., section 7546, providing that m a proceeding instituted by the husband or wife in consequence of adultery, they shall be competent to testify: People v. Isham, 109 Mich. 72. In a prosecution of a man for adultery, his wife cannot testify for the state as to her marriage to and cohabitation with defendant. The testimony of the clergyman and others participating in a marriage ceremony in a foreign country between defendant and a certain woman was admissible. Admission of defendant that he cohabited for a certain time with the woman claimed by the state to be his wife, are admissible. A letter by...
