BY REV. AN: Over fifty years ago (in 1858) a fisherman was on the way to Finmarken. There was, at that time, a gracious revival in Tromso through the labors of Lammers, a converted minister in the State Church. Some of the converts went from Tromso to Mehavn, one of the fishing-camps in West Finmarken, and held a prayer-meeting on the top of a hill. One young convert who was very earnest in praying and exhorting his . comrades to accept Christ was on the way farther north when his boat capsized. With two others he came to the surface and clung to the boat; but while his companions were rescued, the converted man was drowned. When they saw him last, he was pointing his hand up toward heaven as if to say, Meet me there. Fifty years later I baptized one of those men, and the fishermens prayers offered on that hilltop were answered last winter. Mehavn is now a large camp where thousands of fishermen gather every spring. Svend Foyen, the great whaler of Norway, many years ago built a meeting-house at Mehavn and last spring pastor Oscar Nelson, of the Baptist Church, Tromso, rented the house for a month at Easter time. He held meetings every day and...
